Civil War Service of Henry Bennett Tinsley

Henry Bennett Tinsley, so the story goes, ran away from home to join the Confederate Army in 1864, when he was about 15 years old. His mother didn't want him to go. He was in the 6th VA Cavalry, Co I, CSA, according to records in the National Archives and his widow's Pension Application, and served as a courier at Appomattox. At some point he was wounded in the hand by a minie ball which passed between his thumb and first finger, taking out some of the fleshy part of his hand and leaving a permanent scar. After the war he migrated to West Tennessee, but still kept in touch with his family in Richmond, and named all his own children after his own brothers and sisters.
