

Montgomery County, Tennessee, Land Entries 1824-1827

The following are entries, or applications, made to the state of Tennessee to purchase the vacant and unoccupied land in Montgomery County. These entries were compiled from state records dating from October 14, 1824 through April 12, 1871. Although compiled numerically from 1 through 597, this may not be a complete list. The list was found among the collection of land records accumulated by Attorney-General Matt G. Lyle and appears to have been compiled for his use in running titles back to the first land owners of the original grants from the State of Tennessee.

Since Tennessee land fell at different times under the control of three different governments (1) North Carolina, (2) the United States Government and finally under (3) Tennessee, the struggles for control and disposal of that land left many records which are still not completely categorized. Tennessee land, before statehood, was called North Carolina's western land and was occupied by Indians. North Carolina did not have money to pay the soldiers who served in The North Carolina Continental Line and in order to entice them into service, she promised to pay them with land from the western part of that state (now Tennessee). The final result of the revolutionary war determined North Carolina was owner of this land but first it had to be obtained from the Indians by treaty, which was not easy.

This map depicts the various Indian treaties for land in Tennessee as it was obtained from the Indians before it was legally transferred to individuals. The map was copied from Charles C. Royce, The 18th Annual Report of the Bureau of American Ethnology 1896-1897, Government Printing Office, 1904.

Montgomery County fell in District One, which was the Military Land District, in the area north and east of the Congressional Reservation Line - the line between East and West Tennessee.

Eventually, North Carolina was enticed to cede her land to the United States and the Tennessee area became known as the United States Territory South of the River Ohio. North Carolina, however, reserved the right to continue to issue grants to all persons who held outstanding warrants from her for land and also reserved the right to continue to issue new warrants to any of her revolutionary soldiers who had not received their warrants. This restriction prevented ANY warrants being issued by the new Territory South of the River Ohio and the only grant issued by them was for establishment of the town of Pulaski.

Finally, North Carolina, the United States South of the River Ohio and the State of Tennessee agreed to the Compact of 1806, which finally allowed Tennessee to issue grants but she still was hampered by the stagnant land law of North Carolina and was allowed only to issue the grants that would have been issued by North Carolina had she retained control.

The State of Tennessee passed many land laws before any actual granting took place. The land left for Tennessee to sell was the vacant and unoccupied land left between the patchwork North Carolina grants. This land has been referred to as "bits and pieces" but in some cases it amounted to as much as 5,000 acres and in other cases only a few acres. Usually, this land was sold to the person who already owned adjoining land. In some cases, however, there was sufficient land for a new purchaser to purchase a large tract and sell off any unwanted acres.

The entries listed below are the first land grants the State of Tennessee made for land in Montgomery County. To purchase this land, it was necessary for the prospective purchaser to follow the same method as that previously followed by the state of North Carolina. The purchaser made an entry for the land and received a warrant from the state to have the land surveyed and eventually received title issued by the State of Tennessee.

It took a very long time to completely transfer all of the land in Tennessee to individuals. By legislative act of 1903, chapter 416, the State of Tennessee legislated a disclaimer from making any further granting of the land as follows:

"...if the State owns any lands, which have never been granted, they should not be given away by the State, but should be sold at their actual value, and the proceeds turned into the school funds...

"...if the State does not own any lands, it should not be a party to the fraudulently granting of such lands.

"Therefore. . . all laws and parts of laws authorizing land grants in the State be, and the same are hereby repealed."
